Reaching Out

What can we do to reach out to our neighbors? Lots of people come through the doors of the church each week. Some come for worship services or other UBC-scheduled events. Others come for Nia, a community group using our church for a meeting, blood drives, and concerts. In one sense, our mission field often comes to us. Even though my opening question is about reaching out, we don't always have to go somewhere else to reach new people. We can reach out to new people right here within the church.

How do we reach out to people within the building? There are two parts to the answer to this question. First, there are the actions we can take as individuals, and, second, there are the actions we can take as a congregation.

As individuals, reaching out to the people in the building means being here. We can't do it if we never come to church. Once we are here, we can smile, welcome people, and introduce ourselves to anyone we don't know. This mission rests on hospitality. It's okay to tell someone, "I'm glad you are here," or to ask, "Have you found everything you need?" Anything we can do to help people feel comfortable when they are here is one way to make it more likely they will come back.

As a congregation, we can make decisions to help people want to learn more about us. The Church

Rev. Dr. Jerusha Tiller is the Supervising Chaplain of central VA and the institutional chaplain at Fluvanna Correctional Center for Women—the largest, maximum security women's prison in Virginia. A graduate of the Baptist Theological Seminary at Richmond and the Union Presbyterian Seminary, Jerusha has also taught world religions at Virginia Commonwealth University.

Dr. Tennant will be in Chapel Hill celebrating his nephew's ordination as a deacon and preaching at Hillside Baptist Church.

Council has had one idea on their agenda for several months: murals. By hiring a good artist to create an interesting mural, someone who is coming through the space might think, "Who are these people? I'd like to get to know them better." Another form of outreach is the way we take care of our building. The Building and Grounds Committee is exploring freshening up the Fellowship Hall. This will likely involve new colors. Stay tuned. Both murals and new paint are about reaching new people.

What else? What can we do to welcome our neighbor? If you have any ideas, please share them. I want to know.

Peace,
Matt

Our Pastor on WINA

Dr. Tennant was Jay James' guest on WINA's Morning News today. He appears on WINA once per month to provide some commentary on the news from a faith perspective. He talked this month about UBC's PACEM ministry and our need to view our neighbors as people who deserve to be loved and cared for. In case you missed it, you can hear the interview here.

You'll have many opportunities in the coming year to join together and discuss what it means to be a Baptist at UBC. We'll look at what Baptists believe, how UBC's leadership and volunteers are organized, what we believe about baptism and communion, and the many ministry opportunities here at the church. Even if you've been a member of UBC for years, we think you'll discover something you never knew about us.
